

ETHICS GRAND ROUNDS

Tuesday, February 9, 2016 South Campus
D1.602, Noon–1:00, McDermott Plaza Lecture Hall

TAKING CARE OF MUSLIM PATIENTS: SPIRITUAL, GENDER, & END-OF-LIFE ISSUES IN FOCUS

AASIM I. PADELA, M.D., MSc.

*Director of the Initiative on Islam and Medicine, Program on Medicine & Religion
Assistant Professor of Medicine & Faculty, MacLean Center for Clinical Medical Ethics
The University of Chicago*

This presentation will empower allied healthcare professionals, bioethicists, researchers and chaplains with enhanced literacy in the religious and moral dimensions of healthcare delivery. It will use empirical data and case stories from Muslim patients related to end-of-life healthcare provision, and pertaining to requests for same-sex healthcare providers, in order to identify the Islamic ethico-legal values that undergird the healthcare accommodations requested. Moving from theory to practice, the presentation will then focus on analyzing the ethical and practical challenges that emerge in providing culturally-sensitive and ethically justifiable healthcare to the Muslim population.
