DALLAS--Dr. Claude D. Winborn, former head of the Division of Otolaryngology at The University of Texas Southwestern Medical School at Dallas, will be honored by creation of a lectureship in his name at the medical school.

Dr. and Mrs. Winborn will be honored at a reception and dinner Tuesday night (June 25) at Brook Hollow Country Club.

Dr. Winborn will be presented with a certificate "in recognition of his long and meritorious service to The University of Texas Southwestern Medical School at Dallas and the medical community of Dallas. It acknowledges and commemorates the establishment of the Annual Claude D. Winborn Lectureship in Otolaryngology which was sponsored by his many friends and colleagues."

A native Dallasite, Dr. Winborn attended Southern Methodist University and was graduated from Baylor Medical School, then at Dallas. His association with Southwestern began in 1943. He served as chairman of the Division of Otolaryngology from 1956 to 1967.

Dr. Donald W. Alexander, present chairman of the Division of Otolaryngology at Southwestern, will preside at the Tuesday dinner. Dr. Robert G. Tromly of the Dallas Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology and Dr. James L. Baldwin will make presentations. Speaker will be Dr. Charles C. Sprague, Southwestern dean.

After graduating from Baylor Medical School in 1931, Dr. Winborn served an internship at Baylor Hospital and a residency at St. Luke's Hospital, New York City. He was certified by the American Board of Otolaryngology in 1940, and is a longtime member of national, state and local medical societies in his special field of ear, nose and throat problems. He joined the clinical faculty of Southwestern in 1943, and continues to hold a faculty appointment today.
