The general public is invited to a benefit "drop-in" aimed at keeping young medical doctors-in-training and doctors-to-be from dropping out. Maybe even one who is planning to practice in your community.

An art festival benefiting the Dallas Medical Center student loan fund will be sponsored by the Dallas Medical Center Woman's Club Sunday, January 18 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Skillern Student Union on The University of Texas Health Center at Dallas campus, 5323 Harry Hines.

Arts and crafts of 50 different Southwestern artists, including many prize-winners, will be on display. Works in many media, including oil, water color, acrylic, batik, and photography, as well as wall hangings, sculpture, pottery, ceramics, and jewelry will be shown. Prices will range from five dollars to five thousand. Tickets are one dollar. They will be available at the door.

A special medical night and champagne auction will be held for Dallas area doctors, medical students, medical center employees, and their spouses Saturday night, January 27 from 7 to 10 p.m., also at Skillern Student Union. Auction time is 8:15. Art work will also be available for sale at that time. Tickets for the invitation-only medical night are two dollars, also available at the door.

The membership of the club includes women of the professional and administrative staffs of The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, including Southwestern Medical School, the Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences, and the School of Allied Health Sciences as its components, and the wives of men of the professional and administrative staffs of these institutions.
