NATIONSBANK WEST CHAIRMAN CONTRIBUTES TO RESEARCH FUND

DALLAS--NationsBank West Chairman Timothy Hartman and his wife, Toni, have made a $50,000 contribution to The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center's Fund for Molecular Research.

"UT Southwestern plays a significant role in the Dallas community, and Toni and I wanted to support its mission," said Mr. Hartman, a member of the committee of community leaders spearheading UT Southwestern's $150 million campaign. "The work they do there is important not just to Dallas but to the future of all citizens in our state and nation."

Dr. Kern Wildenthal, UT Southwestern president, said, "This personal financial donation is but one aspect of the tremendous support the Hartmans are giving UT Southwestern and its current campaign. Their generous contribution will provide great impetus for the success of the campaign and, most importantly, for pushing forward UT Southwestern's research capabilities."

Mr. Hartman is principal corporate officer for NationsBank in Texas and all other western states. He also is chairman of the board of NationsBank Texas Corp. and NationsBank of Texas, N.A. He serves on the executive board of Dedman College at Southern Methodist University and serves on SMU's board of trustees. He is active in the Dallas community as a member of the Dallas County advisory board of the Salvation Army and as a director of the Dallas Symphony Association.
