DALLAS--A Dallas doctor who has volunteered a half day a week for more than 10 years to teach medical residents, interns and students was honored Tuesday night at a meeting of the Dallas-Fort Worth Obstetric and Gynecological Society.

Dr. Harwin B. (Jack) Jamison was presented a plaque citing "outstanding contributions in teaching" at The University of Texas Southwestern Medical School and Parkland Memorial Hospital.

"Every Monday at 7 a.m. he comes in and scrubs in with the residents in surgery. It may vary from showing a resident basic procedures to very complicated surgery," said Dr. Paul MacDonald, chairman of Obstetrics & Gynecology at UTSMS.

Dr. Jamison was himself a resident in Southwestern's teaching program at Parkland. He is a graduate of The University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston. He did his internship at Kings County Hospital in Seattle, and was a Navy physician in the Philippines prior to the Dallas residency.

The doctor's award was a high point of the society meeting in the Royal Oaks Country Club in Dallas. Visiting lecturer for the event was Dr. Abe Mikail, chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Louisiana State University College of Medicine.
